There are, however, a few installation issues on Macintosh systems, and these are described in this document.. I strongly recommend that you upgrade to the current version of R, and then follow the standard R Commander installation notes for Mac OS X users.

Many of these packages have their own dependencies, which depend on still other packages, etc.. Make sure that your MacOS is up-to-date by running Software Update from the Apple menu in the top-left.

R Commander For MacThe Rcmdr package is a standard R package, and it installs and is loaded in the normal manner.. Using an old version of R will restrict you to an old version of the R Commander as well, and these old versions are now unsupported.. These installation notes are intended for Mac OS X users of versions of R prior to R 3.0.0 R version 3.0.0 comes with an X- Windows installation of Tcl/Tk, and it is thus unnecessary to install Tcl/Tk for X Windows in a separate step. A general point to keep in mind is that the Rcmdr package uses a number of other 'contributed' packages (in addition to packages, such as tcltk and MASS, that are part of the standard R distribution), and these must be present for it to work properly: abind, aplpack, car, colorspace, effects, Hmisc, leaps, lmtest, multcomp, relimp, rgl.. 7-1), car (≥ 3.0-8), effects (≥ 4.0-3)
